Fall/Winter 2006

The Sting

By Edith von Stuemmer

Complaints about 2 groups called "ASTRO" and "MUTTS-R-US", both headed by Clara Church of Taylorsville, N.C., caused our Humane Investigators to begin an inquiry. She travelled the East Coast all the way to Maine every 2 weeks selling dogs and puppies in parking lots for $300. Appointments were made through PETFINDER. Many of the animals were sick and cost the new owners thousands of dollars in veterinary bills. The shot records given to them by Clara Church listed "Doctors Foster & Smith" as her veterinarian. This is a mail order pet supply company!!

We had several of our volunteers select a dog from her website and put in an application. She did not check out information provided on the applications (veterinary records, personal references) and was obviously only interested in the money.

A date, time and place was given to the applicants, and we asked Animal Control to be there in case assistance was needed.

Then we waited at a McDonalds parking lot in Fairfax where she was to appear at 7:30 AM. By 8:30 we began to worry that she might not come, but finally the old green conversion van with North Carolina license plates pulled in. It backed into a parking space behind the building and our volunteers approached, asking to see "their" dogs.

That's when we went into action: we blocked the van with a car, showed our Humane Investigator's identification and began questioning Clara Church and her husband, who was the driver. Their 4 year old daughter was asleep on the floor in the back, amidst all the dog crates.

We found 12 dogs and puppies crammed into crates and cat carriers, lying in their excrements. The stench indicated that they had not been let out for a long time.

The Virginia law requires a state health certificate, dated no more than 10 days before shipment, for any animal

The SPCA of Northern Virginia is an all-volunteer non-profit rescue organization. We rely on membership dues, donations and fund-raising activities for revenue. Our Voluntary Board of Directors, committee members and volunteers are responsible for all SPCA activities. We do not have a shelter facility and depend on foster parents to care for domestic animals until adoption.

Saving the World One Cat or Dog at a Time

It is the hardest job you will ever have but also the most rewarding.

Becoming a foster family can be a very gratifying experience! Our ability to save animals ultimately depends on caring people who are willing to open their hearts and homes to cats and dogs that are seeking a second chance at life. As a foster parent you will provide a needy cat or dog with love, nurturing, and food. The SPCA covers all medical expenses and will assign a "foster buddy" to assist you with the ins and outs of fostering. We currently are looking for people to foster one adult cat, a few kittens, or one medium or large dog.

If interested please call (703) 799-9390 or email spcanova@aol.com and a volunteer will contact you.

Remembering The Animals

At holiday time there are so many things to think about: traveling, visiting relatives, shopping for gifts and parties.

One thing we hope you will remember this holiday season is our animal friends. Sure, many of us buy those silly holiday collars for our pets, maybe even make them have their picture taken with Santa.

But what about those who don't have anyone to do those things for them? That's where the SPCA of Northern Virginia comes in. We provide care and shelter for many animals annually, and we couldn't do it without help from our supporters, like you.

That is why we would like to remind you to remember the animals this holiday season. At the end of the year, many of you are looking for a great tax deduction. As a 501(c)3 organization, any gift to the SPCA of Northern Virginia is tax deductible.

Donations can be made easily using the form on the back cover, or to make a donation by credit card please visit our website transported into the Commonwealth. When imported without such certificate, the animal must be examined immediately by a licensed veterinarian and the examination cost is charged to the owner.

Since none of the dogs had the required paperwork, Animal Control issued a citation and Clara had to follow us to a veterinary hospital. We took the van between 2 cars so there was no chance of an “escape.”

The dogs had coccidia, parvo, were emaciated and dehydrated. Mrs. Church elected to release them to the SPCA rather than face charges. We gave her back her filthy carriers and told her to go home and never come back to Virginia. She said “Don’t worry, I’m never setting foot here again!” (To our knowledge she has not.)

The dogs were very hungry and fought each other to get to the water bowls. One puppy was so sick he could not be saved and a young Rottweiler was not expected to survive an extreme case of Parvo, but after much time and many $$$ he finally recovered. The others were treated and, when found to be healthy, placed in permanent homes.

Astro Rottweiler Puppy—Caesar

We followed through with the North Carolina State Veterinarian and Department of Agriculture, giving them all the information we had, plus statements and records from people who had purchased sick animals in various states along the east coast.

They investigated Mrs. Church and subsequently closed her down. Additionally, PETFINDER.com removed ASTROPets from their website.

Jinxed With Love

By Erin Sweeney

My daughter Tate loves animals. She has taken care of fish, guinea pigs, turtles, hermit crabs and a boa constrictor. Once, we even babysat the school rabbit over winter break. But what Tate wanted more than anything was a pet that didn't live in a cage.

Tate loves cats. But, unfortunately, not every cat loved Tate. Tate would come home from dinner parties at the houses of friends who owned cats covered in scratches. The problem was that Tate's idea of expressing affection to cats was to pick up the cats and carry them around the house with her. However, as Tate learned the hard way, not every cat enjoys being picked up and carried.

When Tate's nanny moved out of town and could not take her cat Maggie, we hoped that Maggie would satisfy Tate's need for a "pet that did not live in a cage". Unfortunately, 11-year old Maggie meowed in terror every time Tate tried to pick her up. Tate became sad and frustrated. For my part, I wondered how to encourage Tate's budding love for animals. I noticed that Tate expressed love to her stuffed animals and dolls by picking them up, carrying them around, cuddling them, and dressing them. I became determined to find a cat that would allow Tate to love the cat the way Tate loved.

Right off the bat, I knew that I didn't want to adopt a cat from an animal shelter. As much as I support adoption of all abandoned animals, I felt that it was important to adopt a cat who was living with a family. I didn't like the idea of a cat living in a cage; I thought the cat might be depressed and/or lonely after living in a cage for awhile. I also worried that it would be a difficult transition for a cat to move from a cage to a house.

I also did not want to adopt a kitten. Because kittens are still developing their personalities, I didn't want to select a kitten that seemed like a good fit for Tate only to have the kitten grow up into a cat with different ideas.

I searched and searched the web for the perfect cat. I began to think that the search was hopeless. And then, one lucky day, I found the splanova.org website and saw a picture of a stray black cat named Jinx. His foster mom and rescuer, Sandy Soto, described him on the website as a cat that loved to be picked up and carried. I immediately called Sandy to discuss the possibility of adopting Jinx. He sounded like an excellent match for Tate. He even sounded like he once belonged to a child. Although Sandy had been feeding Jinx and trying to coax him into her house for months, it was Sandy's young niece who Jinx walked right up to and allowed to pick him up and carry him into the house.

When we met Jinx, it was love at first purr. He was everything we were looking for and more. Jinx lets Tate carry him all over the house, kiss him and cuddle him. Jinx is incredibly good-natured and friendly. He allows Tate to dress him up in her doll clothes. He has even been spotted sporting a pink tutu around his waist as he calmly drinks water from his bowl.

Tate & Jinx

Although Jinx has a particular fondness for children, he has never met a person or cat that he doesn't like. He is our one-cat welcoming committee every time we bring foster cats and kittens into the house. Jinx grooms all of our foster kittens and plays with them like a big brother. We felt so fortunate to adopt such a wonderful cat from SPCA NOVA that we began fostering cats and kittens for SPCA NOVA to give other families the opportunity to adopt cats and kittens raised in a family environment like Jinx.

As a foster family, it continues to surprise us when people tell us they want to adopt a cat or kitten with particular coloring, such as "tabby" or "calico". What we have learned by adopting Jinx is that it is the personality of the cat that really matters. I also learned that the way to ensure that your child becomes an animal lover for life is to find an animal that allows your child to love the animal the way the child loves. Because Jinx loves to be picked up, carried, and hugged, he is the perfect cat for our family.

Choosing the Right Cat For Your Family

There is no more important a decision than the decision to adopt and assume the responsibility for another life. That decision carries an obligation to nurture that life--to give it love--to care for it.

A thoughtfully considered decision to adopt a cat or kitten can result in a long-term, mutually rewarding relationship, but an unwise, spur-of-the-moment decision spells h-e-a-r-t-b-r-e-a-k for family and feline.

Families with small children would be better off selecting an adult, neutered male with a laid-back personality for their family pet. Males generally tolerate handling better than females and if the cat is over 18 months old, the personality and temperament are already well established--"what you see is what you get". Often pet owners adopt a friendly, cuddly, kitten only to discover that as the youngster matures, the personality may also change.

If you already have a resident cat it is important to take this cat's personality and activity level into consideration before selecting a feline companion. If you are too casual about this important decision, your house may become a war zone. Keep the following guidelines in mind when selecting your next family member. Remember that they are only guidelines and that there are occasional exceptions to the rule.

- If you have an adult female who has been an "only" cat for some time, it is best to get a younger female. Males, even friendly ones, can over-power and frighten females. Male kittens, while more easily dominated by the female, still grow up to be rambunctious teenagers that engage in a style of play that involves pounce and wrestle (not a female's idea of fun).
- If a young, active male is your family pet, he would really enjoy having a male buddy who shares his enthusiasm for vigorous play.
- A laid-back, older (neutered) male cat may enjoy "mothering" a kitten--male or female. They usually make better mother substitutes than spayed females. Females, in general, are less accepting of newcomers.
- Males tend to bond with each other unless both have dominant personalities. (A dominant cat engages in a lot of rubbing--scent marking--behavior, likes to rest in high places (for surveillance purposes) and in doorways (to control the entrance to certain rooms), and shows little or no fear.

The SPCA of Northern Virginia rescues many dogs and cats throughout the year that without our help would never find happiness. Some cats and dogs find homes immediately, while others remain in foster homes waiting for their chance at true happiness. Won't you please find it in your heart to offer one of these wonderful pets a home of their own forever?

Searching For Happiness:

Sedona & Sienna

These girls are not sisters but immediately bonded in their foster home. They love to play together seldom letting the other out of their sight. They are believed to be co-conspirators in the kidnappings of numerous stuffed animals in their foster home. The abducted toys have turned up in random locations around the house and the girls aren't saying who is responsible! They get along well with the residents' cats and children in their foster home.

Sedona

Sienna

Sedona is a very friendly female Tortoiseshell born in July 2005 who likes to jump up on your lap to say "hello." She loves to be picked up and cradled in your arms like a baby. Sedona loves nothing more than to be petted and groomed. She carries on conversations with you with a quiet "chirp" and expresses her appreciation for your attention with a loud purrrrrr.

Sienna is a very curious Tortoiseshell girl born in August 2005 who always has to check out what is going on! She can turn anything into a toy -- she's even fascinated by the air coming out of the air conditioning vents! If Sienna feels she's not getting the proper amount of attention she will be sure to let you know. She loves to be petted!

Tortoiseshell ("Torti") - Torties are coated in the lovely colors of Fall, each one reminiscent of a pile of maple leaves glowing in the crisp fall air. Torties share a common personality trait, so unique to tri-colored cats that it's called "tortitude" which can best be described as an 'over the top' personality: impish, playful, loving, humorous, naughty at times, too clever, and totally delightful.

Jenna Pleads “Help Me”

By Joan Hughes

The term “Mayday” is familiar to just about everyone. The spelling represents the pronunciation of the French term for “help me.” Perhaps Mayday should be Jenna’s name, because if any dog needs help, Jenna surely qualifies.

In February of this year Jenna, then a seven-month-old Afghan hound mix, was one of 12 puppies taken into custody by SPCA/NOVA humane investigators Edith von Stuemmer and Barbara Cohen. (See ASTROPets article in this issue.)

During a brief stay at an animal hospital where they received nourishment and medical care, the puppies were behaving like puppies—running, pouncing, grabbing visitors’ shoelaces—all except Jenna, who cowered at the back of her dog run. Not until a couple of the other pups were put in with her did she brighten up a bit.

When they were transported to Lisa Reid’s kennels, all the puppies except Jenna continued to do well and were subsequently adopted. Although never aggressive, Jenna remained aloof and withdrawn.

She was shown at numerous adoption days but didn’t draw much attention and there were no applications to adopt her. However, a couple who had adopted a dog from us came to an open house looking for a friend for him. Jenna enjoys canine companionship and since the two dogs got along well, they took Jenna home, aware of her shyness but prepared to give her the necessary time and attention.

Despite their best efforts, Jenna’s timidity persisted. She enjoyed being petted but was skittish about many noises and being leash-walked, preferring to retreat to her crate. This meant that she was no companion to her “big brother,” who chose to simply ignore her. With heavy hearts her new family returned Jenna to us.

We’re hoping that an adult family with a relatively quiet lifestyle, a fenced yard, and a compatible dog will look into Jenna’s soulful eyes and see the potential there.

In the meantime Jenna waits and hopes to find that loving home. “Mayday.”
